Election/Restrictions

1. This application contains claims directed to the following patentably distinct species:
there are two sub-species regarding the indexing control means for rotating the work holding element, namely, a first sub-species wherein the rotating means is a hand crank 25, and a second sub-species wherein the rotating means is a computerized control 25A for turning the work holding element 28 (as described in at least page 11, the first paragraph thereof).

Additionally, there are multiple sub-species regarding the type of work holding element and how it holds the workpiece, namely, a first sub-species wherein the work holding element 28 includes a pneumatically actuated chuck 22 (actuated by pneumatic control 21) mounted in a rotatable cylinder 26, and a second sub-species wherein the work holding element 28A includes a rotatable plate with a series of radial slots 31 with removable brackets 33 being adjustably mounted in the slots 31 for holding the workpiece 60A, and apparently, a third sub-species (presently set forth in claim 4, which incidentally, may give rise to a rejection of claim 4 under 35 USC 112, first paragraph new matter type rejection upon a detailed examination of claim 4 since it does not appear that the specification as originally filed teaches the combination of the radial slots and brackets with a pneumatic control) wherein the work holding element includes a pneumatic chuck control and also includes the rotatable circular plate having a series of radial slots radiating out from a center of the circular plate around the plate and removable brackets adjustably mounted in the slots for holding the work piece.

The species are independent or distinct because claims to the different species recite the mutually exclusive characteristics of such species. In addition, these species are not obvious variants of each other based on the current record.

Applicant is required under 35 U.S.C. 121 to elect a single disclosed sub-species from each category, i.e., to elect one sub-species regarding the means for rotating the work holding element, and one sub-species regarding the type of work holding element and how it holds the workpiece, for prosecution on the merits to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. Currently, it does not appear that there is a generic claim (because of the inclusion of the “pneumatic chuck control” 21 in claim 1, which as disclosed, does not appear to be used for the sub-species wherein there is a rotatable circular plate with a series of radial slots having removable brackets).

There is an examination and search burden for these patentably distinct species due to their mutually exclusive characteristics. The species require a different field of search (e.g., searching different classes/subclasses or electronic resources, or employing different search queries, particularly performing a wide range of differing search queries regarding the different sub-species above), and/or the prior art applicable to one species would not likely be applicable to another species; and/or the species are likely to raise different non-prior art issues under 35 U.S.C. 101 and/or 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include (i) an election of a species to be examined even though the requirement may be traversed (37 CFR 1.143) and (ii) identification of the claims encompassing the elected species, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered nonresponsive unless accompanied by an election.

The election of the species may be made with or without traverse. To preserve a right to petition, the election must be made with traverse. If the reply does not distinctly and specifically point out supposed errors in the election of species requirement, the election shall be treated as an election without traverse. Traversal must be presented at the time of election in order to be considered timely. Failure to timely traverse the requirement will result in the loss of right to petition under 37 CFR 1.144. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which of these claims are readable on the elected species.

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the species unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) of the other species.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which depend from or otherwise require all the limitations of an allowable generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141.
